

Designer Christian Villum talks about the future of intelligently-designed cities

Posted Nov 28, 2016 by John Biggs \(@johnbiggs\)

This week on Technotopia I talked to Christian Villum, a designer and thinker at the Danish Design Center. His vision of the future is simple: with the right kind of education and the right tools, cities can be reborn with design thinking. His background in hacktivism and making also allowed him to talk about the future of 3D printing in schools and cities.

He's a founding member of Science Friction and currently builds amazing things at the Design Center where he's happy to help small teams use the Center's many resources. You can reach out to him here.

You can download the MP3 here or grab it on Stitcher or iTunes.
